Q.2.C.

'One cannot Communicate'

'One cannot communicate'. According to this there is no way one cannot communicate. We are always communicating; even the silence sends out a message. Verbal and non-verbal, even the lack of action sends message. Silence may be an implicit message to the others. One cannot respond in a communication, though this is communication too. Non-verbal actions sends a message too.

All behaviour is a form of communication in and of itself. Any perceivable communication, including the absence of action, has the potential to be interpreted by the other people as having some meaning.

Everything one does is a message, even when we do nothing, verbally or non-verbally, we are transmitting something: "Activity or inactivity, words or silence all have a message value: they influence others & these others in turn, ~~contact~~ cannot respond to these communications and are thus themselves communicating." Even being silent is a way of communicating some kind of message. Non-communication doesn't exist.

For example: One can nod their head to confirm an action. This has a message value too. Or cannot not respond to this communication, it's a way of communicating too.
